The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because it has not been presented in the proper domestic form. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claims 40-50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, because the specification, while being enabling for treating a pelvic tissue infection, does not reasonably provide enablement for preventing a pelvic tissue infection. The specification does not enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention commensurate in scope with these claims.

A conclusion of lack of enablement means that, based on the evidence regarding each of the factors below, the specification, at the time the application was filed, would not have taught one skilled in the art how to make and/or use the full scope of the claimed invention without undue experimentation.

(A) The breadth of the claims.

The broadest reasonable interpretation of the term infection merely requires that one microorganism gain entry into the cells of a host. There is no evidence that entry would be prevented, therefore the prevention of a pelvic tissue infection lacks enablement.

(B) The amount of direction provided by the inventor.

The inventor has failed to provide any definition of the term "preventing" i.e. it is not clear whether prevention is achieved for a period of days, months, years or whether a permanent prevention is achieved.

(C) The existence of working examples.

No working examples directed to the prevention of a pelvic tissue infection is present in the specification.

(D) The quantity of experimentation needed to make or use the invention based on the content of the disclosure.

Because there is no way to predict a priori how effective the claimed method would be in preventing a pelvic tissue infection, it would take an enormous amount of trial and error to test the claimed method.

Claim 35 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

There is no antecedent basis in claim 34 for an analgesic, a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory agent and/or a local anaesthetic drug of claim 35.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 34 and 37-39 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Herschler (U.S. Patent No. 4,997,823).

Herschler discloses a composition comprising a prostaglandin and an antibiotic (column 2).

Claims 34-50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Herschler (U.S. Patent No. 4,997,823) in combination with Kelly (WO 02/092097 A1) and in combination with Pena et al (WO 02/072066).

Herschler discloses the use of a combination of prostaglandin and an antibiotic for the treatment of pelvic infections but does not disclose vaginal or rectal administration of prostaglandins and antibiotics. However since Kelly discloses vaginal administration of prostaglandins and Pena et al disclose rectal administration of antibiotics, such as azithromycin (pages 3-4), it would have been prima facie obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the claimed composition was made to administer prostaglandin and an antibiotic vaginally or rectally in order to treat a pelvic tissue infection because the results from such an administration would have been predicted.
